Climate Stories Music

Wednesday, April 22, 7:00-8:30 p.m.

How can music and storytelling play a role in responding to the climate crisis unfolding around us? Join us on the 50th Anniversary of Earth Day, as bassist, composer, and educator Jason Davis offers Climate Stories Music. This presentation and performance of original music features the recorded voices of people around the world sharing their climate stories—their personal observations of and responses to climate change in their home regions.

Jason discusses his work in collecting and sharing climate stories via his initiative - Climate Stories Project, an educational and artistic forum for sharing personal stories about the changing climate. He also performs two musical pieces for solo double bass featuring recorded climate stories.

Come find out how sharing your climate story contributes to a powerful societal response to the climate crisis. Visit www.climatestoriesproject.org to learn more. Sponsored by the Friends of the Great Falls Discovery Center. For youth and adults. Free. Wheelchair accessible. Accommodations available upon request.
